WALTERS FOR JUSTICE.

In this issue of the Courier will be found the announcement of Chas. D. Walters for the Republican nomination for Justice of the Peace from Magisterial district No. 3.

Mr. Walters is a young man of splendid character and is a teacher and is well qualified for the office he seeks. If elected he would make a splendid official, being a young man who is sober and who would be active in trying to suppress violations of the law. The Republicans could find no finer type of man for their candidate.

The Courier bespeaks for him the careful consideration of the Republicans of the district.

CRISP FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

In this issue of the Courier will be found the announcement of Rev. M. Crisp, of Wrigley, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative from the 100th district.

Mr. Crisp is an eminent minister of the gospel and is running on a Christian platform, and as a matter of course is for law enforcement. He asks us to state that he is for good roads, for free text books and for all the things that will benefit the country. He is a man of splendid character and if elected to the office to which he aspires he will make an efficient member.

The Courier bespeaks for his candidacy the earnest consideration of the Democrats of the county.

Teachers Examination.
The examination for teachers' certificates will be held at the Morgan County High School building in West Liberty, Ky., on Friday and Saturday, May 20 and 21.

this remarkable man.—The Farmer City (Ill.) Journal.

Join the Agricultural Club.

Every boy and girl in Morgan county, between the ages of ten and eighteen years, may become a Junior Agricultural Club Member by agreeing to do one of the following things, keeping a complete record of all the work which they do:

Grow an acre of corn.
Grow one-eighth acre of potatoes.
Raise the chickens from three or more settings of pure-bred eggs.
Grow one-half acre of alfalfa or sweet clover.
Raise a pig.
Grow one-half acre of soy beans or cowpeas.
Raise a dairy or beef calf.

And there are many other such things which agricultural club members may do, and are doing. Throughout Kentucky there are now more than twenty thousand boy and girl club members who are doing useful, interesting and profitable work of this kind. There is still time to join the club, and now is a good time to plant an acre of corn, to sow cowpeas or soy beans, to set pure-bred eggs, or to start with a pig or calf. Many of the club members will plant the July potatoes, which are planted in July and mature by frost. Alfalfa or sweet clover will be sown late in August on soil prepared this summer.

Club members will be helped and instructed in their work by the county agent, and interesting bulletins and lessons. Each club member will be graded on the size of crop he produces, its cost, and the care with which he keeps account of his work in his record book. Neighborhood and county contests will be held and prizes given. County winners in club work are usually given a trip to the State Fair, or some other reward well worth while. We want a large number of Morgan county boys and girls to join the Agricultural Club, but we want no one who will not begin his work in earnest, and do his best, both at his work and in keeping his records. We are going to organize a community club at your school house as soon as we can, but as the season is already getting late, you should start right away on the work that you want to do, and write to the County Agent at West Liberty that you want to join the club. Both boys and girls are equally welcome to join.

BOB RANKIN, County Agent.

Very Active in Prosecuting.

County Attorney John W. Coffee asks the Courier to say for him that he is very busy in attending the courts of the justices in an effort to prosecute the violators of the law, and that he has not yet had time to get out to see the voters in regard to his candidacy, but that he considers his duty first and that he will continue to perform the duties of the office rather than to look after his private interests. He says that he was very warmly commended by the last grand jury for his activity in getting witnesses before the grand jury and in getting evidence from them.

He wants to say to his friends that he hopes that they will respect and appreciate his devotion to duty and keep in mind that he will try to get time to make a short canvass and will try to see as many of the voters as possible but that he relies upon the good sense of the good citizens to see that he is putting duty before self and that they will be for him.

He wants to urge his friends to keep at work, and says that from the encouragement he is receiving that he has no doubt of his success at the primary.

R. B. Haukin, formerly of Wayne county, arrived Monday to begin his work as County Agent for Morgan county, having been appointed for that position a few days ago.

Base Ball.
Two and three weeks ago last Saturday, respectively, the Mize ball team came over and walked all over the High School team in both games, winning each of them easily.

On last Saturday the Ezel team came over, doubtless expecting an easy victory, but when they came it was the regular ball team that they played and they did not find it so easy. In fact they found them invincible. The West Liberty team had the visitors at their mercy all the time and defeated them in a score of 5 to 1.

The West Liberty team is now one of the best in the mountains and are looking for a few games with some of the best neighboring towns.

Now just a heart to heart talk with the voters of Morgan county. It is evident the good citizenship believes in law enforcement; in equity and justice being meted out to every man. It is a conclusion by a great many of our citizens that the man who will enforce the law, and with undaunted vigor try to suppress crime, has no more show to be elected than a snow ball to last in Hades.

Such a conclusion is absurd and should not be harbored in the minds of intelligent people. Let us stand separately the lives of each aspirant for the various offices, weigh them in the balances and see if they are "out weight" and cast your vote for a clean man, if such there be on the ballot. If not, let the voters at the polls nominate a man and vote for him.

The Chataqua will be here June 11, 13 and 14, and it seems, to the Courier that the guarantors should get busy with their campaign for a record attendance at once.

Menefee county, one of the smallest and of the least wealth, voted a bond issue for good roads by a majority of 882. When the spirit that prevails in our little neighbor extends to the remainder of the mountain counties we will have good roads and prosperity.

The first and second issues of the Salyersville Independent, published at Salyersville by B. J. Elam and J. R. Fyffe, have reached our desk and shows up well as a country weekly.

Mr. Elam is a prominent young attorney of Salyersville and is editor of the paper, and Mr. Fyffe, a graduate of the Courier office, is manager and has charge of the mechanical end. These boys are deserving of success and if the people of Magoffin will stand by them they will give them a first-class newspaper.

BLANTON FOR JAILER.

In this issue of the Courier will be found the announcement of George W. Blanton for the Republican nomination for Jailer of Morgan county.

Mr. Blanton realizes the decided Democratic majority in the county, but has some claims that he thinks will appeal to the people. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and was a good soldier. But he authorizes the statement that if elected he will serve the people for the fees of the office and will not ask the five hundred dollars per year that is paid for the care of the public property. He says that if elected he will take care of the public property without pay for same, or for the fees of the office. He also announces that he will serve his term out and not let the office to others. He further appeals to the people as a poor man who has no means except as he earns it by manual labor and promises a faithful performance of the duties of the office.

The Courier bespeaks for him the careful consideration of the Republicans of the county.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

The editor of the Courier spent Saturday and Sunday in Jackson and found the same conditions prevailing that, in a greater or less degree, prevails over the State in regard to the liquor situation. There, as in many counties, the good citizens are protesting that the local authorities are making no effort to prevent the sale of liquor and that the traffic in moonshine is practically unhindered.

Many good citizens are discouraged and feel that it is almost hopeless to expect better things.

The good citizens of Breathitt county, of Wolfe county, of Morgan county, and of any other county can make themselves potent in the enforcement of the law this year by casting every other thing from them in their voting save their desire for good government, and elect only such men as can be depended upon to enforce the law. Next year they can not do this for it will be too late. This is the year that will decide whether or not we shall have law enforcement or four years of unbridled liquor selling. Regrets will not avail us if we elect men who will not enforce the law. This is the year of opportunity and if we fail to take the advantage we will be estopped by our own acts from complaining.

It is up to the good citizens what we shall have for the next four years.

"Oh, yes, that's it. Well, of course I felt bad about the man, but it wasn't no fault o' mine. Then it seemed like his shufflin' off put the cards right in my hands. I sure proved she was the girl an' now she was left plumb alone. It didn't look no awful hard job for me to shine up an' marry her, before anybody else got wise. Say, I had it all figured out when you an' Dan McCarthy horned in on that fool stunt of yours, an' knocked my game galley-west. Then I cottoned onto that job with you. I didn't aim to stay out there punchin' steers, but just thought I'd see how things turned out. I sorter figured it this way—the girl she didn't care nothin' for you; she just married yer ter get out er there, an' had some place ter live; an' maybe, out there on the Cottonwood, I could make love to her, an' some day we'd skip out together. That's as far as I went at first, an' gosh! out over them prairies, I got it into my head that she didn't have no objection to a little flirtation. I was feelin' quite foxy about it when we got to the ranch."

The lashes drooped low over Olga's eyes, and her cheeks burned.

"Then I reckon the devil must er took charge o' the game, for the minute I was left alone out there I run into a bunch o' Indian cattle thieves. I knew two of 'em for they were out of the Hole here, an' all at once, it struck me I might just as well have the job over with. I took it she didn't care about you, an' that a little strong arm should would pan out all right. It didn't work with most women. I didn't have no notion then of humbugging you off, Shelby, but the back who took that job cracked you good an' hard. Well, that makes the whole story, don't it?"

He shut his eyes, his head falling back in complete exhaustion. Only his labored breathing proved that Macklin still lived. Olga held him motionless in her lap, bending over and softly smoothing back his hair with one hand. Shelby left them there, creeping out through the entrance onto the rock platform without.

It had ceased snowing, but enough had fallen to cover the bluff with a white mantle, obliterating the trail, and leaving the valley below covered. The sky arched over all dull and gray. Shelby hung out over the ledge, watchfully studying the view outspread beneath. It was a peaceful scene enough, with scarcely a moving figure visible. He could hardly realize that this was the haunt of outlaws, where only a few hours before he had been desperately struggling for life. The daylight revealed no sign of disorder or pursuit, the only reminder of what had occurred being the blackened ruins of the burned cabin almost directly below. Yet this was deserted and the snow about appeared untrampled. The sight gave him hope, yet he felt strangely depressed and unmoved.

The remembrance of the scene just witnessed could not be cast off. He had no reason to question the truth of that occasion and it had impressed him strongly. Macklin was evidently dying; was already beyond help. Any breath might prove to be his last, and it was even then too late for any doctor to save him. But would Pancha return in time to assist them? Would she bring sufficient help while her? In spite of the ominous outlook below he felt no faith that Indian Joe would so easily abandon their trail. He was not that kind. Something would assuredly arouse his suspicion that they had not perished in the flames.

Indeed, that could be easily ascertained by a search of the debris, and the perturbed ranchman was far from being satisfied that Pancha alone knew of this secret trail. Why, Macklin staid he had himself been up as far as the cave; and it was scarcely likely it had been entirely overlooked so long by the others—the Indians certainly must have scoured every back of these bluffs at one time or another. Something, for the moment, may have drawn aside suspicions of his escape, yet those devils would think him down. The conviction haunted him.

He drew back just in time. There was the sharp crack of a rifle; a bullet clipped the outer edge of the parapet, and a little puff of smoke curled up away to the left and vanished against the leaden sky. Shelby felt flat on his face and crept backward, seeking instinctively the protection of an overhanging rock, his eyes instantly marking that vague spiral of smoke. He had guessed right. Indian cunning had already learned the truth and had found means of approach unknown even to the Mexican girl. Somewhere in the security of those rocks, keen eyes were watching every movement, savagely eager to end all by some well-directed shot. Yet, with the ching of the bullet, all depression left him. He knew now what he had to face; that narrow platform must be defended, for hours probably, revolvers pitted against rifles; himself alone against an unknown number of assailants. It meant caution as well as bravery, the quick wit of a white man outgeneraling savage treachery. Even as he rolled over, so as to cautiously lift his head, the "45" was jerked from its holster and rested ready in his hand. He heard Olga at the cave entrance.

"Stay back!" he ordered sternly.

"Don't venture out here yet."

"But what is it? I heard a shot."

"Yes; they have found us all right. Hand me another gun; I may need it. Did Macklin have one?"

"Yes; it is still at his belt."

"Get it, and with whatever cartridges he may have. This is going to be a fight at short range. How is the fellow?"

"I—I am sure he must be dying, Tom," she said breathlessly. "He scarcely breathes any more. Isn't there any way I can help?"

"Only by doing what I asked; get his gun. This is bound to be some fight. I don't know how many are out there; the bird who shot at me is he; that rock yonder; he's Indian all right; you can glimpse his scullock just over the edge. If he would only shove his out up about half an inch more I'd show him that a '45' ain't such a bad weapon, when you know how to use it."

He advanced, his revolver barrel across the top, and lay motionless, sighting along the smooth steel.

"Now, boy, you do that again. Can't make out exactly where I have gone, can you? Well, you are going to find out in about a minute." His grip tightened. "Ah! there you are!"

His finger pressed the trigger, sending forth a spurt of flame. A heavy real arm was flung up, the hand gripping the rack for support; then a rifle went crashing down into the chasm and the next instant an Indian whirled head downward, the body striking a narrow ledge and bounding off into space. Three shots answered the crack of the revolver, so swiftly as to seem echoes, the bullets striking the solid rock wall, one, crushed out of all shape, dropping directly in front of Olga, crouching in the entrance, Shelby crouched, but with eyes stern and watchful.

"Three more loaded," he said pleasantly. "Seem to have us pretty well trapped. I'd like to know how they got up here without using the trail. I thought you were going after that extra gun?"

"I am, Tom, but I can't stay in there. I want to be out here with you."

"Why I ain't in a mite o' danger, little girl. Those reds can't shoot through this rock. All I got to do is lie here quiet an' take 'em on the jump."

"But suppose they rush in on you?"

"It don't hardly look reasonable. Still, o' course, they might try it. If they got a white leader, Indians never would themselves; it's liable to cost too heavy."

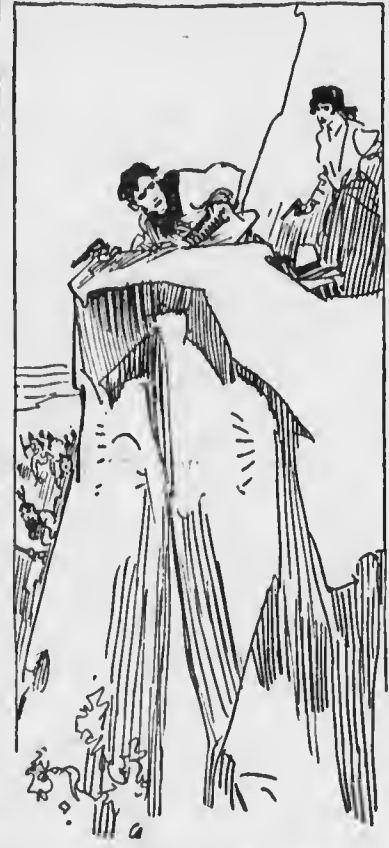

"That is why I am coming back," she insisted. "I told you I came shoot."

"All right," he grinned cheerfully. "Come along; then, you keep down out of the way, and let me do the sniping. There! now you last up a shot! Did you see that back shot? That trick again presently."

Ugla came back, creeping out cautiously and feeling a place slightly behind where he lay. She held it one crayon laying the other on the rocks together with a belt filled with cartridges.

Shelby barely swept his eyes toward her, his whole attention concentrated on what was occurring below. Some thing was making place down there but exactly what could not immediately be determined. He had perceived men moving beyond ridge a dash thing from rock to rock, mere glimpses of dark figures, yet plainly enough armed. Once he was almost sure a disguised white man crouched in a gully but the fleeting view failed was not convincing. Nevertheless he had no doubt but what there were white men present. The method of attack was too bold, and determined, for savages alone; it was not the Sioux idea of war. Besides the one man who would have a real object in this assault would be Laud. Beyond all question it was he who was behind the effort, urged on by personal hatred, as well as a desire to gain possession of Olga. Shelby wondered what the fellow might know. Could he be aware of the escape of Macklin? and that Pancha had ridden forth in search for help? If he did that might account for his desperate eagerness to overcome what resistance they could offer before she returned. Yet probably not, for if he did know the coward in him would cause him to seek flight before he could be cornered in this place. It was far more likely that he believed himself opposed merely by Shelby and the girl, armed with a revolver or two, and having a limited supply of ammunition. He saw little peril in the adventure, and figured that a quick, sharp rush, his warriors leaping from covert to covert, would win an easy victory. He would keep up a steady rifle fire from behind the rocks, forcing the defenders to keep under cover, and then suddenly send a charging party to end the affair.

"Stay Back!" He Ordered Sternly.

Shelby smiled grimly at the mental picture, never turning his head as he spoke to the silent girl beside him.

"How's Macklin?"

"Dead, I think, Tom. He didn't seem to breathe even faintly."

"The poor devil! It will be mighty hard on Pancha though. You got you gun?"

"Yes."

"All loaded, I reckon; if not you better fill it up. There is going to be a—l to pay presently. When I say so, you let drive. Keep down out of sight till then, but when you begin to pump, make her act like a galling."

"But can't those riflemen see you there?"

"Well, it doesn't look much like they can, the way they are pepperin' that rock. Nice little tune the bucks are playin'. That's what makes me think something's up; they ain't keep u—down out of sight, so we won't glimpse what's comin'. Tain't Indian nature to waste lead that way. Laud's back there somewhere playin' this game. I think I got sight of the sneakin' ens a minute ago, but he was out of range."

"You believe they intend to try an' get up here?"

"That's my present notion; they don't look for much trouble either. It is up to us to give that outfit the surprise of their lives."

She reached out her hand and found his, as it rested on the belt of cartridges.

"Tom?"

"Yes," he answered without removing his gaze from the trail below.

"Don't worry about me," she said earnestly. "You know what I mean. I don't think about me when they do come. I'll take care of myself, all right."

He cast a quick glance into her face.

"Sure, I know you will. You are a trump, a good partner. I thought that for a long while. You won't forget what I told you."

"I'll not forget."

There was a moment of silence and then she spoke again, a sharp little catch in her voice which she could not restrain.

"Tom?"

"Yes."

"I—I don't know what is going to happen. I—I am not afraid, but—but it seems to me I—I would like to have you kiss me once more first—you only have once, you know."

Shelby turned his body about, leaving his cocked revolver lying on the stone, and caught both her hands eagerly.

"Lord, I'm glad to hear you say that, little girl," he exclaimed, his eyes aglow. "I reckon I've been sorter half afraid of you. But I ain't going to be any more; you sure mean it, don't you?"

Her eyes looked honestly, earnestly into his, answering him before her lips spoke.

"With all my heart, Tom."

He drew her softly toward him, forgetful of all else. Then a rifle spat viciously, and a ball struck the edge of the parapet, sending a splinter of stone flying past them.

It was a long, nerve-racking wait, during which they rested side by side, intent on every movement below, but finding little opportunity for action. Occasionally they spoke, but generally remained silently watchful. The Indians kept up a desultory fire, and he heard his screen were evidently making a change of position, yet so stealthily as to be hardly observed. They seemed themselves freely enough beyond a new point that they were fit

EGOTISM

There are two different forms of egotism, one a commendable egotism and the other an egotism that makes the possessor and all around him unhappy.

The first kind is that egotism that recognizes the person's worth and insists upon recognition of that worth. A man who knows that he knows how to do something well has a right to, and ought to feel proud of his accomplishment. If he does not go to the extent of boring other people with his own laudation he is justified in bringing his accomplishments or his own powers to the notice of his associates. It is impossible for a man to be an adept in any vocation and not feel sensible of his power in that line, and such an egotism is perfectly rational.

There is another kind of egotism which is a disease. It is a morbid condition which makes his own life miserable and alienates those who would be his friends by imagining that his associates have all sorts of opinions about him. I did not know that this was egotism until I had my attention forcibly called to it by a preacher many years ago.

This evangelist has created quite a sensation in a small town by his preaching, which in that day was considered very radical. I was sitting by him and engaged in a conversation when a member of his church came up to him and asked him: "Did you know that the members are talking very unpleasantly about you on account of your sermons?" I was surprised at the soft answer he gave, and after the dissatisfied man had left I asked the preacher if he did not feel concerned at the antagonism he was arousing. He smiled and said: "I never think of it. I am not the kind of egotist who imagines that he is important enough to be occupying the thoughts of the world. I do not think that, as an individual, I am a person who is of sufficient importance to be kept in the thoughts of the people. My affairs are too insignificant to cause the people to think of me often."

That was many years ago and it gave me a new perspective. Since that time I have observed people and have met many who think themselves so important as to occupy the thoughts of their neighbors to the exclusion of everything else. That is a pitiable condition for any human being. When a person arrives at that point about him he has arrived at the parting of the ways between him and happiness. It is a morbid state of mind that feeds on the soul's unpopularity and grows more intense the longer it is indulged in. The truth is that the big, wide world, and including the little parts of the world, have little time or inclination to dwell long upon the affairs of any one person. The world is too busy for one person's affairs to interest it long.

It is a species of egotism that approaches either hysteria or fanaticism. It is the growth of a morbid soul. Years ago when I was editing a newspaper in a town not far distant a very narrow minister started a crusade on some really harmless things, and suggested evils concerning them that the things themselves never indicated. So strongly did I feel in the matter that I published an editorial stating that the persons who heard the sermons received suggestions of evil that would never have occurred from the things he condemned. That is the condition of the misanthropic egotist. He is forever crediting to people about him opinions of him that he attributes to his associates evil thoughts or evil when the chances are the persons are not even thinking of him. There is the egotism of it. Cultivating a spirit of suspicion in his own mind concerning others he imagines himself of sufficient importance to occupy the minds of the community, even if for no other purpose than to think ill of him.

Misanthropy in the child should be carefully cured by confidence and instruction. Teach him the men who have been really great are men forgotten, and that only a few in the world's history have been of enough force to live for long in the memory of the people. The world is good natured and kind when you have its attention, but you can't hold it long. It is too busy with its own affairs to care much of our individual affairs, and we are only gawking a life when we become so egotistic as to think that we are the center of the stage in every performance or that the world keeps us in mind even to revile us. It doesn't.

Fear of Mrs. Grundy is usually the cause of this species of egotism. Did you ever observe a woman who felt that she deserved it leave a crowd of her kind and afterward make inquiries about what they said about her in her absence? A gossip never leaves a crowd without wondering what is said about her, when the chances are that more important things were talked about and she was not even thought of. But that particular brand of egotism can never understand that its possessor is not constantly in the thoughts of his or her acquaintances. It is only when we learn how infrequently our neighbors think of us that we learn to defy and disregard Mrs. Grundy. The person conscious of their own good purposes are rarely troubled with that disquieting belief that the world is holding a grudge against them.

Most people call this misanthropy, but it is pure egotism. When a fellow gets the habit of pitying himself he is apt to get this disease. He falls into the habit of imagining himself a very much abused person and pampering everything in the darkest colors. He imagines injury where none is intended and often when he is not in mind, and magnifies every act of others and makes his own life unhappy by brooding over imaginary things.

Cultivate the belief that this is a good old world and that it will treat us the best we will allow it to do, and we have solved the riddle of happiness. The world is to us as we look at it. It is only the reflection of our own souls. We see the world as we are. Humanity is just what we believe it to be—good or bad, according to our own conception of it. It gives back the treatment we accord to it.

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. Aware of the father of the weapon confronting them, but closer in the savages crept from rock to rock in silence. Twice only did Shelly succeed in getting a fair shot—once clipping a scaly lock from an incautiously exposed head, and again wounding a brave who recklessly attempted to leap across a narrow opening. This fellow dropped in the open trail, wounded in the thigh, and unable to drag himself to shelter, and soon a shrewd red arm reached out from behind a rock in an effort at rescue. This was withdrawn quickly as a speeding bullet struck within an inch of the outstretched hand. The injured warrior lay there twitching with pain.

The minutes dragged into half an hour, the strained nerves of the defenders on edge. Olga was trembling from head to foot, struggling to retain self-control, Shelly never relaxing.

Owing to the re-districting of Morfour magistrates while it seems quite a concentration of power, yet I guess its fair. Now voters, it behooves us as taxpaying citizens to study well the character, and qualifications of each candidate in our respective districts.

Let him be a man of broad intellect, a man who will deal out justice to every man regardless of friendship or kin, a man in whose hands we can trust our welfare, knowing, the county's funds will not be misappropriated, and then elect a man for county Judge, a man of the same type. Then we will have an official team that we will all feel proud of.
